

Stacey Lankford Pennington

Stacey Lankford Pennington has been involved in planning, design, community engagement and development in Downtown San Diego for fourteen years (since 1999). Initially working with Lankford + Associates, she was very involved in Broadway 655 + Smart Corner. After a few years in the industry, she pursued a Master in Urban Planning at Harvard University Graduate School of Design, graduating in 2005. She was awarded the Harvard University Frederick Sheldon Traveling Fellowship to research sustainable innovative housing delivery systems in urban environments in Europe.

Stacey created SLP Urban Planning, an Urban Planning and Design firm focused on integrating best practices in sustainability and community engagement in 2006. While she spent several years balancing a broad spectrum of clients and projects, her current work is focused entirely on the planning, design and implementation of Makers Quarter, San Diego's next urban neighborhood.

Stacey is a member of the Downtown San Diego Partnership Board of Directors and Move San Diego Board of Directors. She is heavily involved in the Downtown Vision Plan as a member of its Urban Design Steering Committee. She also serves on the East Village Association Design Committee.

Stacey is the proud mother of 2 boys – Cole + Beau.
